PREFACE

THE Provincial Cabinet of Coins was formed in 1904. Its inclusion in the following year amongst the collections benefited in the distribution of treasure trove is responsible for its acquisition of the greater number of the coins which are now catalogued. In 1909 the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal presented to the Cabinet a selection of coins from the duplicates discovered in the process of cataloguing their collection along with that of the Indian Museum. The association of Assam with Eastern Bengal between the years 1905 and 1912 led to the Cabinet's securing some interesting finds of Bengal coins from the Dacca and Mymensingh districts, and valuable finds of coins of this class have also been made in Sylhet and Nowgong. The Cabinet consequently now possesses a very representative collection of some of the Bengal Governors and Kings. The chief strength of the Cabinet, however, naturally lies in the class of Assam coins. An appeal to local officers when the Cabinet was first formed only produced about thirty of these coins in addition to a small collection of twenty-two presented by Munshi Muhammad Shah of Jorhat. In 1906, however, a find of nearly a thousand coins, mainly of the Ahom Kings, occurred on the Daflating Tea Garden in Sibsagar. As Deputy Commissioner of that district from 1906 to 1909 the present editor was able to purchase a number of coins for the Cabinet, and in 1914 eighty-five more Assamese coins were purchased from a private collector of the same district. A selection of Manipur coins was presented by the Manipur Darbar in 1908, and a number of Koch coins by His Highness the Maharaja of Cooch Behar in 1909. The small but interesting collection of the rare Kachari coinage was purchased in the North Cachar Hills in 1912.

The first catalogue of the collection, which was published in 1911 and described about 600 coins, was prepared under the supervision of Mr. H. E. Stapleton, Indian Educational Service, who was then Honorary Secretary to the Coin Committee, Eastern Bengal and Assam. A supplement containing the description of nearly 1,300 additional coins was brought out by Mr. R. Friel, I.C.S. and the present editor in 1919. Since then a large number of coins has been added to the Cabinet and the preparation of a new and complete edition of the Catalogue is overdue. The number of coins now catalogued is over 4,000.

Brief introductory historical and descriptive remarks on the several classes of coins were included in the first edition of the catalogue. Their purpose will now be better served by a reference to that admirable little book "The Coins of India" (The Heritage of India Series) by C. J. Brown, (1922), and they have accordingly been omitted from the present edition, except in the case of the Assam sections, the strength and local importance of which call for a more detailed account than can be expected from that work.

In dealing with the Bengal coins Part I of Mr. H. E. Stapleton's "contributions to the History and Ethnology of North-Eastern India" which appeared in J. A. S. B. XVIII, 1922, has been found most helpful; and the edition has to thank Mr. Stapleton for allowing him to use also certain notes compiled with a view to later and as yet unpublished parts of the same work.

The editor desires to acknowledge the courtesy of the Government of the United Provinces in allowing the Catalogue to be printed at the Government Press, Allahabad, and the care and patience with which the Superintendent of that Press has carried out a difficult piece of work

† Raja Ganesh was a Hindu zamindar of Bhaturia in Northern Bengal. His son became Muhammadan, and took the name of Jalal-ud-din Muhammad Shah and the throne in 1415. It has been suggested that Raja Ganesh assumed the sovereignty himself in 1417 under the name of Danujamardana, and that on his death in 1418 his son who had been deposed and nominally reverted to Hinduism at first succeeded as a Hindu under the name of Mahendra Deva, but very soon resumed the Muhammadan faith and the name of Jalal-ud-din Muhammad. Vide "Coins and chronology of the early Independent Sultans of Bengal", by Nalini Kanta Bhattasali, M.A.

PART VIII.
ASSAM COINS.

SECTION XXXIV.

THE AHOM KINGS OF ASSAM.

The founders of the Ahom kingdom were Shans, who in 1228 A.D. crossed the Patkoi range, which bounds the Brahmaputra Valley at the extreme east, and settled in the neighbourhood of the modern Sibsagar. For about 300 years they remained a unit among the several tribes that then inhabited the Brahmaputra Valley, but about 1530 A.D., under the leadership of Suhuñmuñ, they succeeded in finally conquering their principal rivals, the Chutiyas and Kacharis, and were brought into intimate contact with the world outside the Assam Valley by an unsuccessful invasion of the Muhammadans, who then ruled over Eastern Bengal. Their success evidently inspired them to imitate the coinage of the Muhammadan Kings of the Husaini dynasty, and in 1543 the first Ahom coin was issued by Śukleñmuñ, the son of Suhuñmuñ. This coin has an inscription in the Ahom language and script, and, following a statement made in the Yogini Tantra that the Ahom country was octagonal, the coins are octagonal instead of round; but in other respects they follow closely coins of Nasrat Shāh and Ghyasuddin, two of Alā-ud-din Huseñ Shāh's sons. The progress of the Ahoms towards Hinduism is reflected in the Sanskrit inscriptions (in the Assamese or Bengali character) on two coins of Jayadhvaja and Chakradhvaja. The earlier coins, with the exception of those of Śukleñmuñ bear the dates of accession of the kings who issued them. Rudra Simha, 1696—1714 A.D., introduced an annual issue from 1696 (1618 Sāka), and specimens of coinage in the Assamese script are known for nearly every year until the end of the Ahom rule in 1821 (1743 Sāka). Even after the introduction of the annual coinage, however, the old association of coinage with the king's accession was maintained, at any rate in the case of certain kings, by the issue of coins in the old Ahom character in the first year of the reign. All the full coins are on the same lines, the obverse containing the name of the king and the date of the coin, while the reverse contains an expression of the king's devotion to particular deities. The form of the inscription appears to have been borrowed directly from the coins struck by the Bengal Hindu kings Danu-jamarddana and Mahendra Deva in the 15th century. The most interesting coins of the series are those minted in the name of Siva Simha and Rájesvara Simha. The former king permitted his wives to strike coins on his behalf, and in 1651 Saka his queen Pramathesvari for the first time broke away from the Assamese tradition by striking at Garhgaon a square coin in Persian script. The shape of this coin may have been derived from the square Manipuri coins, issued shortly before by Chairomba. Rájesvara experimented in new forms of coinage almost throughout his reign. Besides ordinary octagonal coins in Bengali script, he struck in the first year of his reign octagonal coins in Ahom script (vide coin at bottom of Plate VII) and square coins in Bengali script were also issued. Besides these, he issued octagonal coins with a Nagari inscription in 1675 Saka and at least two issues of coins in Persian were also struck,—a square issue in 1674 Saka and an octagonal issue in 1685. On both the latter coins the name of the mint, Rangpur, is mentioned.

Towards the end of Assamese rule, the Vaishnava section of the inhabitants of Assam constantly broke out into rebellion against their kings, who were followers of Siva. In the time of Gaurinátha Simha two Vaishnava usurpers began to strike coins in Upper Assam, and the Assamese kingdom was only saved from immediate dissolution by the temporary intervention of the British in 1794 A.D. Owing to the adoption of a policy of non-intervention, the British soon withdrew, and for nearly 30 years anarchy prevailed. Towards the end of this period, invasions of Burmese occurred, and the last King of Assam, Jogeśvara Simha was a puppet of the Burmese Governors. The last dated coin known is a quarter-rupee of Jogeśvara minted in 1743 Saka (1821 A.D.)

The aggressions of the Burmese finally led to a British expedition for the purpose of ejecting them from Assam and Manipur. Rangpur was occupied at the beginning of 1825 A.D., and by the treaty of Yandabo, signed on February the 24th, 1826, the Burmese King undertook to have no further dealings with Assam. Owing to the atrocities perpetrated by the Burmese, Assam had fallen into a most deplorable condition, and the administration of the country was entirely conducted for several years after the treaty by British officials. An attempt to reinstate Purandara Simha, who had previously reigned for a short time in 1818 A.D., ended in failure, and from 1838 Assam has formed an integral part of British India.

The rupees and gold mohurs of the Ahom kings were struck to the Indian standard of about 176 grains. Rudra Simha appears to have introduced half and quarter rupees. An eighth and a sixteenth both of the rupee and of the mohur were introduced by Rájesvara, and a thirty-second by Gaurínátha. There was no copper currency, its place being taken by cowries.

SECTION XXXV.

THE KOCH KINGS.

The progenitor of the Koch Kings is said to have been a Mech or Koch named Haria Mandal, a resident of Chikangram in the district of Goalpara, and the recognized head of twelve leading families of Meches (or Koches) living in the Khuntaghat pargana. He married the two daughters of one Haju, and had two sons, Bisu and Sisū. The Muhammadans under Husen Shah conquered the local kingdom of Kamata about 1493, but retained no permanent hold on the country. After their departure it was divided amongst numerous petty chiefs, of whom Bisu was one. Ultimately, about 1515 A.D., Bisu succeeded in conquering his neighbours, and, being then converted to Hinduism, he assumed the name of Bisva Simha, and removed his capital from Chikangram to the present site of Kuch Bihar. He died about 1540 A.D. At the time of his death, his two eldest sons, Malla Deva and Sukladhvaj, were away at Benares, and their brother, Nara Simha, taking advantage of their absence, proclaimed himself king. As soon as the news reached Malla Deva and Sukladhvaj, they hastened home and defeated Nara Simha, who fled to Nepal and finally Kashmir. Malla Deva then ascended the throne under the name of Nara Nārāyana, Sukladhvaj (nicknamed Silarai, King of the Kites, from his rapidity of movement in warfare) being appointed the commander-in-chief.

The Koch power reached its zenith during the reign of Nara Nārāyana, and his conquests are said to have extended over the whole of the Assam Valley, the Khasi and Jaintia Hills, Manipur, Tipperah, and part of Sylhet. When Viryavanta, the Chief of the Kheiram State on the Khasi Hills, tendered his submission voluntarily, the Buranjis state that a condition imposed on him was that his coins should, in future, be struck in the name of Nara Nārāyana, with the sign of a mace as a distinguishing mark from those of the Koch king's own mint. Specimens of these latter coins, however, have not yet been found, and the Khasi chiefs have no record that their predecessors ever struck coins of their own.

Finally, however, Nara Nārāyana himself succumbed in 1568 to an invasion by Kālā Pāhār, the famous general of the Bengal Sultan Sulaimān Kararāni. Silarai was taken prisoner and carried to Gaur, but was later released and returned home. Nara Nārāyana probably regained his independence whilst the Pathan Sultans of Bengal were being subjugated by the Emperor Akbar.

Nara Nārāyana did not marry till late in life, when he had a son Lakshmi Nārāyana. Up to then, Silarai's son, Raghu Deva, had been regarded as his heir, and after Silarai's death Raghu Deva quarrelled with his uncle and was allowed in 1581 to set up a subordinate kingdom in the area east of the Sankosh, undertaking to strike coins only in his uncle's name. On Nara Nārāyana's death, probably in 1587, Lakshmi Nārāyana succeeded him in the western part of the kingdom and struck coins dated 1509 saka (1587 A.D.), whilst Raghu Deva declared his independence and struck coins in his own name in the following year.

Neither of the Koch kingdoms long retained its independence. Lakshmi Nārāyana declared himself a vassal of the Mughal Emperor in 1596, mainly apparently with the object of obtaining assistance against his cousin. This object was attained and Raghu Deva's son Parikshit was defeated in 1612 or 1613 by a Mughal force. Lakshmi Nārāyana and his descendants continued to reign in the western kingdom, which later became known as Kuch Bihar, but only as vassals of the Mughal Empire. The right of minting full rupees was denied to them, and henceforth their coinage consisted only of the curious half rupees with incomplete inscriptions which are known as "Nārāyani rupees." The only known exceptions are two or three full coins of Prāna Nārāyana in the British Museum, which bear the saka date 1555 (1633 A.D.). These were probably struck during the period between 1658 and 1662 when Prāna Nārāyana is known to have made a bid for independence. The date on the coins probably represents the date of Prāna Nārāyana's accession, and the coins may be regarded as a claim to independent status "with retrospective effect."

The eastern Koch kingdom, or Koch Hajo, ceased to exist as an independent kingdom with the defeat of Parikshit. Its territory was a bone of contention between the Muhammadans and the Ahoms until 1638 when the Bar Nadi was accepted as the boundary between the two powers. The descendants of Raghu Deva administered a tract as subordinates of the Ahoms but had no right of coinage. The only known coins of the eastern Koch kingdom are a very few rupees of Raghu Deva, one of them being in this Cabinet, and a single rupee of Parikshit in the collection of the author.

The Koch rupees closely follow the model of one of the coins of Husén Shah of Bengal. The inscriptions are Sanskrit, in an archaic Bengali script, and are on similar lines to those of the Ahom coins. The half-rupees are struck from dies much larger than the coins, and the inscriptions are therefore incomplete.

The copper half-coins included in this section are unintelligently executed copies of the Koch half-rupees, and are probably Bhutan copies of those coins.

SECTION XXXVI. THE KACHARI KINGS.

The Kacháris are described in Gait's History of Assam (Ch. X) as the earliest known inhabitants of the Brahmaputra valley. The traditional descent of their royal family from the Rajas of Kámarupa, of the line of Ha-tsung-tsa, is referred to in the inscription on one of the coins described below. In 1536 the Kachári capital at Dimapur on the Dhansiri was sacked by the Ahoms and the Kacháris established a new capital at Maibong in the North Cachar Hills. In 1706 Maibong in its turn was sacked by the Ahoms, and was abandoned in favour of Khaspur, in the plains of Cachar. Such information as is available regarding the names and dates of the Kachári kings is summarized in the following list which is taken from Sir Edward Gait's History :—

The Cabinet possesses coins of Satrudaman under the title of Pratáp Náráyana and of an otherwise unknown king of the name or title of Jaso Náráyana Deva. One of the coins of the latter king is fortunately a dated rupee, the date (1505 sáka 1583 A. D.) showing that Jaso Náráyana Deva occupied the throne some twenty years before Satrudaman. The existence of a coin (figured as no. 10 of Plate XXIII J. A. S. B., Vol. VI, no. 4) of Támradhvaj, the reigning king when the Kacháris were driven from Maibong to Khaspur in 1706, shows that this series of coins continued for at least 120 years. A coin of a more modern type (pages 161—166, J. A. S. B., Vol. VI, no. 4) was issued by the last Kachári king Gobinda Chandra.

SECTION XXXVII.

THE KINGS OF JAINTIAPUR.

Within historical times the dominions of the Rajas of Jaintiapur extended over the tract in the plains of Sylhet now known as the Jaintia parganas, in which their capital Jaintiapur was situated, and the adjacent hill area, known as the Jaintia Hills and inhabited by the Synteng branch of the Khasis, which was the original home of the dynasty. The inhabitants of the Jaintia parganas preserve in their traditions a list of kings of whom the seventh, Dhan Manik, is known to have been reigning at the close of the sixteenth century. The first of the list bears the name of Parbat Ray, "Lord of the Hills", and it seems probable that he was the Synteng chief who first extended his sway over the plains tract, perhaps early in the sixteenth century. Hardly anything however is known of the history of the earlier rulers except the occasional record in the Koch and Ahom annals of their conflicts with the Koches, Ahoms and Kacharis. The records of the Koch kings state that in the middle of the sixteenth century Silarai, brother of the Koch King Nara Narayana, defeated and slew the Raja of Jaintia and imposed on his son the condition that he should not issue coins in his own name. An inscription on the gateway of the ruined palace at Jaintiapur states that it was erected by Lakshmi Narayana, who ruled at the end of the seventeenth century. The Jaintia Rajas maintained a precarious independence until 1835, when their territory was annexed by the British in consequence of the sacrifice of three British subjects to the goddess Kali.

The rupees of the Jaintia kings, like those of the Koch kings, were modelled on coins of the Husaini dynasty of Bengal. The inscription is on the same lines as those on the Koch coins, except that the issuing ruler was described merely as "the Lord of Jaintiapur" and not by name, owing, according to tradition, to the stipulation imposed by Silarai. Coins are known bearing the saka dates 1591, 1592, 1630, 1653, 1696, 1704, 1707 and 1712 (A. D. 1669, 1670, 1708, 1731, 1774, 1782, 1785 and 1790), and it may fairly be assumed that as in the case of the Koch and earlier Ahom coins, these dates represent the dates of accession (or perhaps of the installation) of the kings who issued the coins. Quarter rupees dated 1653 and 1712 saka bear the names of Bar Gosain and Rám Simha respectively, the stipulation imposed by Silarai being apparently regarded as applying only to the coinage of full coins.

The rupees are locally known as katra tika (sword rupees) from the fact that they bear the device of a two-handed sword and a musket on them. They are made, particularly those of later date, of debased metal, doubtless a result of the system under which the right to mint coin was sold by auction to the highest bidder.

It is unfortunate that the small collection of Jaintia rupees which was described by Sir Edward Gait in J. A. S. B. No. 3, 1895, as having been purchased for the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and which contained certain coins, including the two quarter coins mentioned above, of which there is no other record, was not forthcoming when the Society's collection was catalogued along with that of the Indian Museum.

SECTION XXXVIII.

MANIPUR.

Mackenzie writes as follows in his North-East Frontier (page 1491).—"The early history of Manipur was barbarous in the extreme. It was not only marked by constant raids of the Manipuris into Burma and of the Burmese into Manipur, but by internal wars of the most savage and revolting type, in which sons murdered fathers, and brothers murdered brothers, without a single trait of heroism to relieve the dark scene of blood and treachery." The modern history of the State begins from the time (1709 A.D.?) when Pamheiba (or Gharib Niwaz, as he was called subsequently) shot his adopted father and occupied the throne. The records of Manipur contain a list of chiefs, given below for what it is worth, going back to the first century of the Christian era, but many of these earlier chiefs are probably entirely legendary.

The Shillong Cabinet has been singularly unfortunate as regards Manipur coins, as two collections have been lost in transit. The few coins catalogued below belong to the series locally known as Sel or "Shell" coins, and are composed of bell-metal, obtained chiefly from Burma. They are small in size, weighing 8 to 18 grains, and varying in market value from 400 to 450 to a British rupee. The process of mintage consisted in the metal being first cast in little pellets, which were then softened by fire. The pellets were next flattened by a blow of the hammer into an irregularly rounded figure, and stamped by a punch with a letter cut on it (said to be the initial letter of the regnant king's name). There is no evidence of there having been at any time a gold coinage in existence; but Prinsep states that a square silver coinage existed from at least 1712 A.D. A square coin of Chaurjit dated 1734 saka, which is in the possession of Mr. Stapleton, weighs 173 grains. About seven years prior to 1873 A.D. an attempt was made by the then Political Agent to introduce the ordinary Indian copper coinage, and a large number of pice were supplied by Government. The experiment, however, resulted in total failure, as the women in the bazars refused to accept them. Since the British expedition of 1891, however, the indigenous coinage has ceased to be current except in the more out-of-the-way parts of the State, the ordinary English coins of silver and copper being used instead. Square copper coins of larger size and of greater weight are also known to have been in use in Manipur.

(a) "Is used like the alif of Hindōstānī, merely as a fulcrum for carrying the other vowels when they are initial" (Grierson). The inherent vowel sound in Āhōm being ā, vowels have only to be indicated when a consonant has a different vowel sound than ā. (b) In combination, the prefix of this vowel is omitted. (c) In combination, if the suffix be omitted, this vowel sometimes stands for l as in "lend". (d) Only found in open syllables. (e) In combination the suffix is dropped.

The consonant and vowel columns give the forms of the letters as found in the Āhōm Buranjis.

ĀHOM MUHUR OF RĀJESVARA SĪMHA (SÜREMPHA).
